Early in the round of inspection, Mr Rockefeller hunted up Dan Morelli, coal digger, who had been elected by the men of the Berwind camp to represent them in conferences with the officers of the company. Dan had just dicers of the company. Dan had just come from the mine and his face was grimed with black dust. The two sat down side by side on the steps of the mine office and talked earnestly for perhaps twenty minutes.

Mr. Rockefeller questioned the miner closely on the practical working of the scheme recently started for conferences between officers of the company and representatives of the miners.

Leaving the caryon late in the afternoon, the party returned to Trinidad, where Mr. Rockefeller was entertained at a picture show and saw a filmed representation of a parade at the recent field and track meet given by employes of the Colorado Fuel and Iron Company. Company.
During his trip Mr. Rockefeller was accompanied by President J. F. Welbern and other officers of the company.

Mr. Rockefeller apparently was greatly interested in the work being done in the school.

"They do not sing very well, sin," apologized the pretty school ma'am, "you see, they have just started and then, they are so little—"

"They're doing fine—fine," replied John D. Rockefeller, jr., smiling broadly. And sixty sons and daughters of Berwind and Tabaseo miners, of an average age of six years and of perhaps a dozen nationalities, sang lustily, in good Unifed States, the song in which they had been carefully drilled by Miss Edna Campbell, teacher of the first grade.
